EDITED / REPRINTED / DECEMBER 1990

"To be connected to others, to belong, to receive social support when needed and be able to give it is an important part of mental health. A healthy society provides opportunities for people to be connected in these ways in forms and associations of their own choosing, and provides special help for those unable to avail themselves of such opportunities."

We are asking your cooperation in determining approximately how many times this Directory is being used. Please start to use this survey at the beginning of the month after you receive it, and use the chart below to record the number of uses for six (6) months. Using a simple counting method (/////), keep track month-by-month of uses by (a) members of your group, (b) your own staff, and/or (c) clients or members of the public who use your group's/agency's services. At the end of the sixth month, remove this survey from your Directory, fold in thirds, tape or staple together and drop this postage-paid sheet in the mail to us.

FOREWORD

by Phyllis R. Silverman, Ph.D.

Over the past two decades we have witnessed a change in the way we go about meeting our needs for support and guidance when we find ourselves facing stressful situations or critical periods in our lives. Not too long ago the most appropriate thing to do, to help us deal with this stress, would have been to seek the advice of professionally trained experts. Personal experience gained from solving problems was discounted and we automatically deferred to the expert. Professional knowledge has not always lived up to our expectations and was sometimes not as effective as we hoped. In addition, services were often delivered in an impersonal manner and some of us were uncomfortable about being treated as "cases." We began to look for new sources of knowledge that might be more helpful and other organizational settings that might be more supportive and responsive to us as individuals.

We discovered that the source of this knowledge was all around us in peers who had similar experiences. By sharing our common struggles and common humanity we could gain new knowledge and new perspective. Without this type of mutual aid, no society is viable. Exchanging resources and information is what makes neighborhoods and families work.

Now another dimension is being added that focuses on the special knowledge some people gain from effectively dealing with a particular problem. These people don't always live in the same neighborhood, nor are they part of the same family. To make this expertise, gained from personal experience, available to others, people are joining together in informal and formal organizations that are sometimes called "self-help" groups. Others call them "mutual help" organizations. I prefer the term "mutual help" since it more accurately describes the exchange that takes place between people when they share the experience they have coping with a common difficulty.

Over the past two decades, we have witnessed a proliferation of these organizations. They have demonstrated the value of peers using their personal experience to help each other with a common stressor. They have also legitimated this kind of help as effective and appropriate, adding to the resources available in a community. What distinguishes this type of organization from other helping organizations is the fact that, to be a leader or helper in the organization, people must have experienced the problem personally. Professional training is irrelevant in this context. In addition, generally people join mutual help groups as members. They pay dues and elect officers, and helpers are chosen from the membership according to criteria established by this membership. Sometimes they are affiliated with a national organization. In other instances, they are a local grassroots effort.

The assistance offered by mutual help organizations can take many forms. It may include one-to-one exchanges, informal rap sessions, educational seminars (either on an occasional basis or as part of a regular series on a range of topics specifically relevant to the problem of group members), social gatherings and the sharing of personal experience by small groups in formal or informal settings. Some groups have hot lines through which persons in need can reach them and get immediate help with a problem, and others have active outreach programs in which experienced members make unsolicited efforts of help to potential members. For example, members of Mended Hearts visit people in the hospital before and after coronary surgery. Many widowed programs send a note to the newly bereaved shortly after the funeral.

Thus, while we may talk about groups, help in a group setting is, in fact, only one of the kinds of help offered in most mutual help organizations. Each organization has its own body of information and helping strategies particular to the problem with which it is concerned. The best known of these is the 12 Steps of Alcoholics Anonymous which has been adapted to their special needs by other anonymous groups concerned with, for example, gambling, overeating and child abuse. Other groups concerned with disabilities or life cycle issues such as bereavement, have a more flexible approach. Regardless of the format, members learn from each other what they can do about their situations.

Why is such help so effective? This help has special meaning since it emanates from people who have had similar experiences, making it easier to identify with the helper and providing a certainty that the helper knows exactly how they feel. People no longer feel alone with their problem and discover that what they experience as unusual is common to others in a similar situation. Members' feelings and experiences are legitimated and a framework provided for coping with the situation. Peers are more understanding and patient, and their expectations are more appropriate than in other kinds of help. In addition, receiving help from a peer tends to minimize a sense of weakness or incompetence in the person needing help. Not only may the need to find someone like oneself be central to learning to cope with change, but the opportunity to change roles and become a helper may be as important as well. People become helpers when they have achieved some perspective on their problem and are willing to share their personal successes as well as their failures with others newly arrived in the same condition they were once in. In the words of a member of a mutual help organization for the widowed: "When you help others, you help yourself."

This directory is designed to help consumers find appropriate groups at times of need. It is also designed for professionals to facilitate their making referrals, thus expanding the repertoire of helping resources available to people they serve. Another function of the directory is to help people distinguish between mutual help organizations and organizations directed and staffed by professionals that bear similar names. By their very nature, professional agencies cannot be mutual help organizations. Some of them have been offering support groups. These groups have an integrity of their own, but they are not a substitute for affiliation with a mutual help group. In an agency, people are not members of the organization, they do not make policy and they do not, in turn, become helpers themselves. They are clients; professional staff make policy and provide the available help. There are perils in borrowing helping modalities as if the context in which the help is offered does not matter. Contexts in fact do critically change the nature of the help offered. The more professionals are involved, the more the help offered is likely to resemble group therapy. This can be inadvertently deceptive for people looking for mutual help experience.

Most people at times of stress need a range of services. All of these services cannot be provided in one setting or by one type of helper. It is my hope that this directory will facilitate making this range of services available; and that, on behalf of people in need--and that is all of us at one time or another--this directory will facilitate the collaboration between all helping resources available in a community.

I N T R O D U C T I O N

PURPOSE

The purpose of this Directory is to make mutual help groups in Massachusetts more visible and accessible to the people who need them. These groups, by their very nature as informal, grassroots organizations, have neither the resources nor often the intention of becoming well-publicized. Yet these groups of people helping each other handle their common problems or conditions provide a valuable helping resource in our communities. The tremendous growth of mutual help groups over the past 15 years provides compelling evidence that they are meeting genuine human needs. Research shows that over 15 million groups utilize our greatest community resource--people--in efforts to help one another.

MASSACHUSETTS COOPERATIVE EXTENSION

This publication is the 4th edition of a statewide directory of mutual help groups published by Massachusetts Cooperative Extension in its efforts to collect and disseminate mutual help group information. Massachusetts Cooperative Extension is an informal educational agency utilizing the assets of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, Massachusetts counties and the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Extension offices are located in several counties, as well as the University's Suburban Experiment Station in Waltham, the Marine Experiment Station in Gloucester and the Cranberry Experiment Station in Wareham.

Extension transmits practical information produced by research centers and universities to the public. Extension's aim is to help people identify and solve problems, many times through the use of new technology. Extension's byword has traditionally been "helping people help themselves."

Support Networks in Massachusetts: 1st Edition, 1985

A Cooperative Extension research project called "Strengthening Family Support Networks in Massachusetts" began in early 1984 and produced Support Networks in Massachusetts: A Listing of Self Help Groups for Families and Individuals in May 1985. The purpose of that Directory was to simultaneously provide information on support networks in the state and to dig up information about those we had not heard of. Readers responded to that first statewide Directory by telling us about groups we had omitted or listed incorrectly. Transferring our listing to a Digital Rainbow computer provided by the University of Massachusetts Division of Home Economics and Cooperative Extension, our database became more fluid and responsive to the new information we continued to receive.

Support Networks in Massachusetts: 2nd and 3rd Editions, 1986

The 2nd Edition of our statewide mutual help directory, titled Support Networks in Massachusetts: A Listing of Self Help Groups, was published in May 1986. There was a greater demand for this resource than we had anticipated and our supply of 2400 copies barely lasted three months. More revisions were submitted, and we faced a funding termination date of October 1 with a backlog of requests for the Directory and a bundle of new and revised listings to incorporate. As a result, both a 3rd Edition and a Supplement to the 2nd edition were published in the fall of 1986 to incorporate recent changes and to fill the backlog of requests we had received.

MASSACHUSETTS CLEARINGHOUSE OF MUTUAL HELP GROUPS DIRECTORY

The 3rd edition was the first directory of the Massachusetts Clearinghouse of Mutual Help Groups. We have begun to use that title to acknowledge that Massachusetts Cooperative Extension has been carrying out several of the functions of a "self-help clearinghouse" described by Borck and Aronowitz in Prevention in Human Services (Vol. 1, 1981): compilation of information; publication of a directory; and information and referral on mutual help groups.

There were 350 mutual help groups, associations and support networks in our computer database. At least 25 of these listings were reference points for statewide networks of anywhere from 10-100 different chapters or groups. Alcoholics Anonymous, the Compassionate Friends and the Cancer Information Service are examples of such listings in the 3rd Edition. Putting all these numbers together, it is safe to say that we know of over 1,000 groups in the state of Massachusetts in which people who share a common problem or condition are exchanging help with each other.

New Directions for the Clearinghouse in 1989

1989 was a significant year of our clearinghouse. We expanded the Advisory Board and seriously began the process of establishing a firm financial foundation. A newsletter was mailed to over 1200 people; there is a commitment to publish this newsletter four times each year. Workshops and conferences are being planned to support "self helpers" and to establish better interaction between professional services and the network of support provided by the mutual help movement. As of January 1, 1990, the membership of the Advisory Board of the Massachusetts Clearinghouse of Mutual Help Groups consists of:

- Bill Berkowitz, Solomon Mental Health Center
- Robert Gallant, Highland Valley Elder Services
- Gail Lewis, Cen. Mass. Area Health Education Center
- Arlena MacPherson, Home Services Connection
- John Oliviera, Corrigan Mental Health Center
- Warren Schumacher, Cooperative Extension
- Ray Silvia, O.R.P.H.A.N.S. Foundation
- Phyllis Silverman, Institute of Health Professions
- Carol Swenson, Simmons College of Social Work
- Ken Thomson, Tufts University
- Dave Weed, Corrigan Mental Health Center
- Tom Wolff, Area Health Education Center

This publication represents our 4th edition that will be released in May, 1990.

GUIDELINES FOR GROUP LISTING

We know there are more groups out there we have not yet heard about. Many of the revisions and additions included in this 4th Edition came to us via the postage-paid Directory Response Forms, three of which you will find at the back of this Directory. Please use these to let us know about mutual help groups we have omitted or listed incorrectly. Groups need to fit the following criteria in order to be listed:

- A. The group is composed of members having a vested interest in a special life challenge.
- B. The group's authority and control rest with the members of the group.
- C. The primary source of help and expertise is in the group itself.
- D. The group has ongoing meetings
- E. Membership in the group is free or requests are made for donations or fees to cover costs of operations.

Using these guidelines, some groups or programs included in the 1st and 2nd Editions have not been listed here because we felt they did not meet the guidelines. We firmly believe that these programs and groups provide essential services, and we intend to make no statement regarding quality or importance by our decision whether or not to list certain groups. Our chief concern is that consumers using this Directory be clear about the services offered and be able to find the mutual help group they seek.

HOW TO USE THIS DIRECTORY

Finding Groups

This Third Edition gives you two ways of locating groups, depending on how much you already know about the group(s) you seek:

1. To locate a group in your area for a particular kind of need, look in the Table of Contents at the front of the Directory for the Sub-Category which most closely matches that need. Turn to those listings and look for your county within that Sub-Category. For example, if you want to know the name of a group in Worcester County for mothers of young children, you first look under the Main Category of Parenting. Under Parenting, the Sub-Category dealing with mothers' groups is called Networks. Turn to the pages which list groups under "PARENTING: Networks--" and look under Worcester County, where you will find the names of several groups.

2. To locate a group that you already know by name, look up the name in the Index at the back of the Directory, where you will find the page number of the group's listing. If you do not find your group in the Index, double-check for it in the Table of Contents under the Main Category and Sub-Category headings where it should be listed. Check those Sub-Categories in the Directory. If you still can not find your group, go to the back of the Directory and fill out one of the Directory Response Forms and mail it to us. We will add your group to our database as soon as possible.

In compiling this Directory, we have tried to list all groups in the manner they preferred. Some statewide networks, such as, Parents Anonymous and The Compassionate Friends, which maintain up-to-date information on all their groups, asked that we simply list a single contact number for the whole state. Others, such as Emotions Anonymous, The Ostomy Association, and Mended Hearts, sent us contact names and phone numbers for all of their groups in Massachusetts.

Reading a Group Listing

All groups are listed alphabetically by (1) Main Category, (2) Sub-Category, and (3) County. Listings for every group in this Directory (except for Hospital Self-Help Groups) follow a standard format. Some group entries will be longer than others if they have more than one Contact Person, several phone numbers or longer statements of purpose. The example of the Alliance for the Widowed on the next page illustrates the group listing format:

BEREAVEMENT: Widowed-- Barnstable
ALLIANCE FOR THE WIDOWED
P.O. Box 1762 Hyannis MA 02601
Ethel Lahteine, President (617)-771-3208
225 Main St.#7, Hyannis, MA 02601
Virginia Greene (617)-775-6689
8 Meadowbrook Rd., W. Yarmouth, MA 02673
To bring together widowed men and women in a social atmosphere and also to help on a one-to-one basis. Meets two Sundays a month.
85/12/30

Explanation of Group Listing Format:

Top Line: MAIN CATEGORY: Sub-Category-- County Name

Second Line: GROUP NAME

Third Line: Group's Mailing Address

Fourth and Fifth Lines: Contact Person #1 with phone number and mailing address.

Sixth and Seventh Lines: Contact Person #2 with phone number and mailing address.

Eighth Line: The group's statement of purpose.

Final Line: Most recent date of contact with this group.

Hospital Mutual Help Groups

This section of this Directory lists the member-run mutual-help groups sponsored by or meeting at those hospitals in Massachusetts which responded to a mail-in request in the fall of 1985. There are, of course, many more hospital-related groups in the Commonwealth, but we felt it was important to list those we did have for this edition of the Directory.

Below is a sample Hospital listing with an explanation:

Marlborough Hospital
Social Service Department
57 Union St.
Marlborough MA 01752

ALZHEIMER'S SUPPORT GROUP

Lucille Killoh, Social Serv. Dept (617)-485-1121

Meets monthly

CANCER SUPPORT GROUP

Same contact as above; meets monthly.

86/02/28

Explanation:

Each hospital listing begins with the hospital's name and address, followed by the names of the groups in capital letters.
Under each group name, you will find the person or department to contact for information about that particular group, with a contact phone number. As with all the other group listings in this Directory, the final line gives the most recent update.

Contacting a Group

To contact a group by mail, please use the Group Mailing Address listed on the third line if it differs from a Contact Person's mailing address. Many groups are coordinated by people in their spare time, and they use a post office box for group mail instead of their home addresses.

To contact a group by phone, call Contact Person #1 first because they are more likely to be able to give you the most helpful information about the group. If unable to reach that first Contact Person, try the second. Many of the contact phone numbers are home phones, so several tries may be necessary. Many self-help groups follow the anonymity principles of Alcoholics Anonymous and do not list Contact People. For each of these, there is a contact phone number you can call.

If a group is not within traveling distance, consider contacting the group for information, literature, networking and advice on starting a local chapter.

If You Do Not Find a Group in Your Area

If you are looking for a mutual help group in your area dealing with a particular need and are unable to find one, please let us know. You can contact the Massachusetts Clearinghouse of Mutual Help Groups by mail at the address shown on page vi or by using the Directory Response Form. We can be reached by phone at (413)-545-2313 (Cooperative Extension at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst: ask for Dr. Warren Schumacher.

We will keep your name, interest and location on file and do our best to connect you with a group or with other individuals who have expressed a similar need.

Information and Referral offices throughout the Commonwealth can be helpful in locating self-help groups. The "Additional Directories" listed at the end of this Directory will provide you with further assistance.

Give serious consideration to starting a new group in your area. The Massachusetts Clearinghouse can provide you with ideas and assistance for getting started as well as linking you with others. Experience has shown that connecting people who have similar needs for a group where no group exists can be like rubbing two sticks together to start a fire. The next section of the directory gives a step-by-step guide to starting your own group.

PLEASE NOTE: The listing of an organization in this directory does not necessarily imply an endorsement of its purpose or quality, nor does any omission signify disapproval.

Mutual Help Groups: What Are They?

Mutual help (or self-help) groups are groups of people with common concerns who have come together to help themselves and each other by sharing information, experiences and personal solutions. Such groups help participants feel less isolated by providing social support. The idea is that, by pooling experiences and knowledge, participants can greatly increase their personal resources to manage a particular life challenge effectively. The expertise for problem-solving lies in the collective wisdom of the members themselves. Ever since the founding of Alcoholics Anonymous in 1935, mutual help group members have found that in the very process of giving their help to others, they are helping themselves. (Credit to: The Self Help Directory (Sacramento, CA) and The Connecticut Directory of Self Help/Mutual Support Groups.)

Mutual Help Groups: Who Are They For?

Mutual help groups exist for almost every medical condition, and for most compulsive or addictive behaviors. There are groups for many of the life transitions such as divorce or death our families face. They can also be helpful to people whose physique, or other conditions, set them apart from "the norm", such as people who are unusually tall or parents of twins. There are groups which assist people who have experienced traumas in their past which bother them today. Self-help means a group where openness, informality, friendliness and getting involved are the usual way of doing things. If those qualities sound good, maybe self-help is for you! (Credit to: Helping You Helps Me, by Karen Hill/Health and Welfare Canada and The Self Help Directory, Sacramento, CA)

This directory lists groups which have been in existence anywhere from 50 years (Alcoholics Anonymous) to a few months. Regardless of their age, size or membership, most mutual help groups are started by small groups of people who share a common problem, who have tried other ways of dealing with it and have turned for help to others who share the problem. By working together these people have created their own organizations which give them new hope for living. There are many different effective ways to get a mutual help group started, and every organization has its own unique story to tell. But the experiences of successful groups can be described in seven basic steps, leading up to their first public meeting.

1. Gather a core group of like-minded people

First, you must define as clearly as possible the situation or characteristic you want to do something about. Think about groups or individuals who might share your interest in the problem and make a list of them. Look in this Directory, contact social service agencies or Information & Referral lines in your area to find out what groups already exist so you will not be "re-inventing the wheel". As you begin telling people about your idea, you'll find others who will want to be part of it.

2. Think mutual help from the start

Some of the people who express an interest in your idea will want to help you organize a group, while others may simply want to join a group once it's established. Ask those who are interested in organizing with you to become part of the "core group". As your core group begins deciding what needs to be done, spread the responsibilities around so everyone is involved. Mutual help groups thrive on shared leadership.

3. Define the purpose, select a name

The group purpose is a statement about what you expect the group to accomplish; the group name is a succinct expression of your purpose. Making this a shared process with your core group will allow members to talk about their own reasons for becoming involved. Clarifying your shared visions by deciding on a purpose statement and a group name will help you talk about your group to the public.

4. Determine membership guidelines

Who can join the group and who cannot? Most mutual help groups are informal. People come and go as their needs are met. But you may need to place some limits on membership and that would mean having to say "No" to some who want to join. Some questions to think about are: Is the group only for people who share the problem or interest? Is it open to their families and friends as well? Are there any geographic or age limits?

5. Find a suitable meeting place

The most commonly-used locations for mutual help group meetings are: churches, YMCA/YWCA's, community centers, senior citizen centers, local libraries, banks, town halls, community colleges, or hospitals (especially if your group is health-related). To find a place, make use of personal contacts members of the group have. Use members' homes only as a last resort: a neutral place allows the shared leadership idea to function more freely. Some members may feel burdened with the responsibility of hosting the meeting.

Your meeting place should be large enough for 15 or 20 people. A kitchen or a sink for making coffee is desirable. Placing chairs in a circle so people can see each other makes for a friendlier atmosphere than a classroom arrangement.

In arranging a meeting place, be sure to communicate that your group is a voluntary non-profit organization intending to provide a service to the public free of charge. Be clear about when and how long your meetings will be and who will be responsible for opening and closing the place.

6. Publicize your first public meeting

A variety of publicity approaches may be useful:

a. Think about where potential members of your group regularly go. Contacting physicians, clergy or other professionals can be useful. Use flyers, personal contact or hand-outs to reach these potential members.

b. Run off flyers about the meeting to post in libraries, hospitals, professional offices, community centers, shopping centers or post offices.

c. Place a free announcement in your local newspaper's community calendar.

d. Use word-of-mouth and personal contact as much as possible. Call people who might be interested and invite them to come. The personal touch helps people feel like they belong.

7. Conduct your first public meeting

Consider which of the following preparations your group will want/need to do: setting up chairs, a resource table, some refreshments; arranging for a speaker or film to highlight your issue; having a couple of core group members to greet people as they arrive; designing a planned agenda to be used flexibly as the meeting progresses.

Begin the meeting by having the members of the core group introduce themselves and their experiences which led to the formation of the group. Tell people about your core group's organizing work thus far and the group's purpose.

Give everyone at the meeting an opportunity to introduce themselves, their interests in the group and to briefly tell their own story. Allow these self-introductions to be optional; do not pressure newcomers to "tell all" at the first meeting. Building a safe atmosphere takes time.

These introductions will raise issues the group can then begin to discuss. Make sure everyone gets introduced before proceeding into a discussion of issues. A person with leadership skills and knowledge of group process is helpful, though not necessary, in facilitating group discussion. If it seems appropriate, try to focus the discussion towards activities and tasks which those in attendance can begin doing. Having something to work on helps people feel a sense of ownership of the group. The sooner people feel that the group belongs to them, the better.

Before the meeting is over, decide a time and place for the next meeting. Also have a sign-up sheet ready for names, addresses and phone numbers: you may want to have people sign this as they arrive. Copy this membership list and, if they consent, send it out to people to encourage between-meeting contacts.

SOME HELP FOR THE HELPER: A GUIDE FOR THE SELF-HELP GROUP CONTACT PERSON

by Barbara White and Pat de la Fuente

As contact person, you are the essential link between someone in need and your self-help group. When a prospective member finally gets the courage to call, your response can make the difference and determine whether or not that person will come to a meeting. You will also be a crucial link to the public at large; your name and phone number will appear on your group's media announcements and flyers. Your responsibilities can seem overwhelming unless you have support - and that's where this Guide comes in.

Designed primarily for the new contact person, we hope this Guide will be useful to experienced contact people as well - and that you will tell us what works for you and what doesn't, so the Guide can be revised to meet your needs.

Some contact people with experience in self-help groups have already given us some good advice, which can be summed up as: "Know yourself." One group leader described the ideal contact person as "patient, compassionate, understanding." Another advised contacts to be "sensitive to other people's needs, but not so overly sensitive that you take their problems home with you." Other groups look for "a good listener - willing to listen to a 40-minute phone conversation;" "someone who knows when to share the load with others in the group;" "someone able to give full attention to a person in crisis." Chances are, if you and your group want you to be a contact person, you already have many of these qualities.

Most groups have found that callers are most comfortable talking with a contact person who shares their problem and is involved in the group. This is especially true of groups that deal with very sensitive issues such as incest, AIDS, child abuse, etc. In some instances it is much more comfortable for the caller to be offered the option of talking with someone of the same sex, age group, or with the same condition or experience, etc. It is advisable that contact people be veterans, which means they have had a good deal of experience dealing with their own situation, which places them in a much better position to be of help to others.

A few groups prefer a professional as the contact person, to determine whether the caller can be helped by the group or requires an alternative such as individual therapy. However, a new person often prefers to talk to someone who has "been there."

If, after doing some soul-searching, you feel that you know yourself and the needs of your group, this guide can help you with some of the basics, such as:

- Setting Up a Telephone Contact System
- Responsibilities of a Contact Person
- Handling Difficult Calls
- Preventing Burnout

SETTING UP A TELEPHONE SYSTEM

As always, the best advice is: Don't try to do it alone! Is there a way to rotate coverage of the phones? Can your flyers list two or more phone numbers? The Phone Company has a "call forwarding" service which, although expensive, may make it possible for several members to act as telephone contact people.

Answering Machines: Pros and Cons

Answering machines are great for taking messages when you are away. They can also give you the opportunity to return calls at your convenience, when you are not busy with personal matters and you have the emotional energy to respond to someone who needs support.

If you do use an answering machine, the message should include:

- Your name and the name of your group.
- The date, time and place of the next meeting (updated regularly).
- The best time for you to return the call.
- The name and phone number of another contact person, if available. Try not to crowd the message tape with too much information; it can confuse the caller. And make sure you call back promptly!

But answering machines do have their drawbacks. Some callers are not comfortable leaving messages on machines, especially when talking about personal matters. Others feel that picking up the phone to make the call took tremendous courage, and they become frustrated and discouraged when they hear a recorded message. Nothing can replace a caring human voice and a listening ear.

Answering Service

Some groups, particularly large organizations with many chapters, employ an answering service or local hotline to be used as the main number for callers seeking information about their group. Although answering services can be efficient, and sometimes offer their services around the clock, they tend to be less personalized than contact people. They lack the firsthand experience with the group and the problem which helps people make the decision of whether or not they want to attend a meeting. Services can, however, offer the names and phone numbers of local members should someone want to talk. Answering services can be costly and they have limitations; however, they are an alternative for groups who receive a lot of calls.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF A CONTACT PERSON

One experienced contact person described responsibility as "the ability to respond." Your response to callers can include:

- listening to them
- educating them about your group
- encouraging them to come to group meetings
- referring them to other resources

Listening

- * Compliment the courage of the caller . . . As a self-help group contact person you are often the first person the caller has reached out to and asked for help. Many people find it exceedingly difficult to admit they need help with a problem. To go one step further and ask a stranger for help is clearly a courageous act. To support a caller who may be extremely anxious during this initial contact, it is helpful to compliment the person on having the courage to call.

- * Frequently use the caller's name . . . If the caller has given you a first name, try to remember it and use it frequently during the telephone conversation. This helps to communicate a sense of caring about the caller and gives the conversation a friendly tone.
- * Be an active listener. Most of us need a little time before we feel comfortable enough to talk about sensitive issues. Encourage callers to tell their story and express their concerns and feelings without interrupting or pressuring them to get to the point. Bear in mind that sometimes a caller's true concerns will come up later in the conversation.
- * Clarify the person's problem or need. During the course of the conversation, clarify the caller's problem and expectations. If your group is not likely to meet the caller's expectations let the person know and, if possible, refer them to a more appropriate resource.
- * Share some of your experience. While sharing experiences is fundamental to self-help, during this initial contact, talk about your own situation only as it relates to the caller's experiences. Refrain from overwhelming callers with the burden of your problems as well as their own.
- * Be clear about your limitations. Rather than present yourself as an "authority" on the issue, be yourself, another person who shares the caller's problem, and focus on sharing what has worked for you.
- * Follow through on promises. The credibility of your group is at stake. If you make any promises (e.g. returning the call, sending literature, etc.), try to follow through as soon as possible. If you do not have the time, ask for some back-up from other group members.

Educating Callers About Your Group

You need to tell callers the purpose of your group and what it does and does not offer. Try to be as accurate as possible. Although you may be very enthusiastic about your group, too much enthusiasm during this initial contact, particularly regarding your group's philosophy or beliefs, can turn people away. Beware of overwhelming your caller.

Try to offer "cautious optimism." Often a caller believes that you and your group can "make it all better." You need to remind the person that the illness grieving problem is an ongoing process which won't go away overnight (or ever), but you can also offer something positive, such as "Now you know that a support group exists, and we are here for you."

Callers will need factual information, such as the date, time and meeting place of your group. They may also have some basic questions such as:

1. What is the purpose of your group? - (e.g. Is the main focus educational; mutual support, social, advocacy)
2. What are the group members like? - (e.g. How many people attend meetings; number of males vs females; average age of members; how long do most members stay with the group)
3. Are the members' problems the same or similar to the caller's concerns? (e.g. How broad is the focus; has anyone experienced the same loss, medical treatment, illness, problem)
4. How does the group work? (e.g. Does it follow a 12-step program; is it facilitated by a professional; how is it structured; does everyone have to talk; are there guest speakers)

Encouraging Callers to Attend Group Meetings

Since people often get nervous at the prospect of attending a meeting with a group of strangers, your job as contact person is to lessen some of that anxiety and make it possible for them to take that next step. Some useful strategies include:

- * Acknowledging the caller's concerns. Letting a person know that most people feel nervous about coming to a first meeting can be reassuring to a caller. Offer to meet prospective members at the door of the meeting place a few minutes before the meeting begins to help them get acquainted. Just knowing that you will be greeted by a somewhat familiar person can help a person feel more comfortable.
- * Describe a typical group meeting. People tend to be more willing to approach new situations if they know what to expect. In describing a typical meeting, include general information and a description of how a meeting works. Reassure the caller that the group respects a person's decision to not participate in group discussions. This is particularly important for people who are anxious about talking in front of groups.
- * Respect a caller's decision to not attend a meeting. Let callers decide if and when they are ready to come to a meeting and respect that decision. People who are initially hesitant sometimes need to give their situation a little more thought before they're ready to take that next step.
- * Set limits on your availability to listen. Since a group helps in ways that extend far beyond a phone call, keep in mind that your job is to help people take their next step toward helping themselves joining a mutual help group.

Handling Difficult Calls and Helping Callers Through Difficult Situations

Experienced self-helpers understand that "difficult people" are actually just "people experiencing difficulty." These difficulties can be expressed in a variety of ways which may try your patience. Below are some suggestions for dealing with some of these other situations.

1. Unwilling or "unready" to attend a meeting. People dealing with a difficult situation may need to vent their anger and frustration during a contact call. After you have provided a caller with the opportunity to express feelings, the person may be ready to listen to suggestions and information about your group. But sometimes, after a lengthy talk or even several phone calls, a person still may not wish to attend a meeting. At that point, you can say that you cannot provide any more help; emphasize that the group can offer more information and support than you can give over the phone. Don't be surprised if the person calls back at a later time, relieved that someone finally listened, and is now ready to hear about a self-help group.
2. Long Phone Calls. If a caller starts to repeat previous statements or begins bringing up new information not relevant to support group issues, it's time to end the call. A useful technique for this situation is to let the caller know that you think what they are saying is important, so important that it should be saved for the whole group to hear. Another approach is to let the caller know that while you cannot stay on the phone any longer, you will be happy to pick up this discussion at the next group meeting.
3. Phone Calls at Inconvenient Times. If you do not use an answering machine, you may be plagued by inquiries at times when you are least able to focus attention on the caller. One way of dealing with this situation is to gently say "I only have a few minutes to talk right now. I'd be happy to call you back at a later time". If the caller sounds upset, the value of a backup contact person is that you can refer them to another resource. Acknowledge the caller's feelings and needs and offer them the alternative (e.g. "You sound upset and I understand your need to talk right now. Unfortunately, I was just leaving but let me give you a number of another person that may be able to talk with you now). Always let a caller know that you are sorry that you cannot talk with them at the moment but that you would be very happy to talk with them when you have the time to really listen. Be careful not to sound as if you do not care or won't make the time to listen or you may lose a prospective member.

On the other hand, don't berate yourself for not being able to be available all the time. . . ultimately, that perspective leads to burn-out.

4. A Person In Crisis. For most contact people, veterans and newcomers alike, the most difficult caller you may encounter is the person who is suicidal or experiencing an emotional crisis. The call is difficult for a number of reasons, not the least of which is the contact person's concern for "doing the right thing." Keep in mind that as a contact person, it is not your job to provide crisis intervention. Your major goal is to try to calm the caller down so that you can refer them to an appropriate resource or collect enough information (e.g. name and location) to get a local emergency team to the caller.

If faced with a crisis call here are some pointers:

- Use a calm, reassuring voice. This can help calm a distraught caller. Gently acknowledge their feelings, "You sound upset. Just take your time and we'll talk when you are ready." or "Why don't you take a couple of deep breaths to make you feel better." Let them know that it's all right that they are upset. Realize that it was probably very hard for them to call a stranger in their time of crisis, and they may even feel a little foolish. Helping the caller to feel more relaxed might enable them to explore with you other support networks they may have, such as family, clergy, mental health centers, or friends. You may ask "Can you talk to a family member about this?" or "Have you considered professional help to get over this rough time?"
 - Be empathetic. Let the caller know that you understand and care. Make an occasional "MmHm" so that they know you are listening. Let them do most of the talking.
 - Make referrals. If they are still in crisis, refer them to local emergency resources (i.e. mental health center, hospital emergency room, police department, or hotline). If a caller is in imminent danger of committing suicide, it is imperative that you try to find them professional help as quickly as possible.
 - Know your local resources. This is not the time to go hunting for information. Always keep a current listing of local resources near your phone. It might be a good idea to call the local mental health centers, emergencies rooms and helplines beforehand to find out exactly what kind of services they provide, and how you can use them if you are ever faced with a crisis call.
 - Know your role and accept your limitations. Many contact people participate in their group because they want to help other people. However, helping people to help themselves is not the same as rescuing. As a contact person, you are probably not trained in crisis intervention. You can listen to the person in crisis, and make referrals, but it is important to acknowledge your limitations to yourself.
5. Referring Callers to Other Resources. As noted above, it is vital to have a list of local resources when dealing with someone in crisis. In addition, you will probably find it helpful to maintain an updated list of community resources such as physicians, social workers, home health aides, etc. The Self-Help Clearinghouse can provide you with a listing of local helplines and other support groups.
 6. Dealing with the Media. If your group is large enough, you may be able to have someone else handle phone calls from the media (newspapers, radio and television), while you attend to prospective members. Keep in mind that publicity of any kind is likely to generate a large number of phone calls, and you may be overwhelmed. Don't be afraid to ask other group members for help.

It is your job to develop rapport with the media, your ability to discuss your issues clearly and enthusiastically will be a great asset to your group.

7. Obscene Phone Calls. The best way to handle an obscene phone call is to hang up. Many times the caller's sole purpose is to get a reaction. If you merely hang up instead of responding or listening, the caller may stop calling. If the caller persists, contact the phone company. Making an obscene call is against the law.

PREVENTING BURNOUT

Burnout is a serious problem with no easy solutions. However, you can work to organize your group so that no one is unduly stressed. Suggest strategies to prevent burnout include:

- * Have more than one contact person and rotate the name of the first person listed on any publicity material. This will provide a more even distribution of calls among your contact people with no one serving as the "one and only."
- * Use one telephone number to give out names of contact persons to call. These names can then be changed every month or so. This way, many members share the responsibility throughout the year.
- * Limit the contact person's length of service. If your group receives many phone calls it can help to know that you will be rotated off duty after a certain amount of time. Just anticipating the "foreverness" of the duty can accelerate burnout.
- * Develop structured guidelines. Some groups develop specific guidelines on how to handle certain situations of types of calls (e.g. what to say to the media, how to handle inappropriate callers, how long to talk with any one caller). This policy can relieve the contact person's sense of burden. Sometimes, just having guidelines can help a contact person stay "focused" on a particular issue without having to worry too much about "how should I handle this, or what should I say about that." Written guidelines also ensure a continuity and consistency between contact persons and can serve as a training manual for members new to the job.
- * Share with your group. As a final point, please keep in sight the fact that you are a member of a support group... people helping people. If you feel overburdened or you are concerned about a particular call, share your feelings with the other members of your group. That's what it's all about. ♥

This Directory of The Massachusetts Clearinghouse of Mutual Help Groups has been revised by Warren Schumacher, Massachusetts Cooperative Extension, Division of Home Economics at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

We wish to express our thanks to:

Phyllis R. Silverman, Ph.D., for writing the Foreword to this directory, and for her support and encouragement of our efforts to organize a statewide Clearinghouse of mutual help groups in Massachusetts.

Thomas J. Wolff, Ph.D., for his assistance in seeking funding for this directory and for sharing with us his extensive experience in the mutual help field.

Bill Berkowitz, Ph.D., for his useful feedback on directory organization and format, his encouraging words and thoughtful ideas.

Gertrude Lashway, Cooperative Extension secretary, for her tireless work on the nuts and bolts of publication.

The various agencies who helped in our search for groups and in formulating the category headings by sending copies of their own directories:

New Jersey Self-Help Clearinghouse, Denville, NJ
Answers at Memorial Hall Library, Andover, MA
Connecticut Self Help/Mutual Support Network, New Haven, CT
Westchester Self-Help Clearinghouse, Valhalla, NY
Sacramento Mental Health Association, Sacramento, CA
Elder Services of the Merrimack Valley, Lawrence, MA

And to the many self-help groups, associations and interested professionals who responded to our calls for help by sending information about groups.

ABOUT THE MENTAL HEALTH ASSOCIATION

The MENTAL HEALTH ASSOCIATION OF CENTRAL MIDDLESEX was established as the education and prevention arm of the mental health system in 1956. We are a private, non-profit citizens' organization devoted to the advancement of mental health, the prevention of mental illness, and the rehabilitation of the mentally ill. We believe that PREVENTION holds the greatest potential both in human terms and for cost effectiveness.

The MENTAL HEALTH ASSOCIATION has a long record as the sole, objective source for information and referral. We are able to provide this important objectivity because we are not providers of direct clinical services. Devoted to the concepts of Education, Prevention and Advocacy, the MHA is the CLEARINGHOUSE FOR MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES AND PROGRAMS in Central Middlesex.

We serve nine towns - Acton, Bedford, Boxborough, Carlisle, Concord, Lincoln, Littleton, Maynard and Stow. MHA is a tax-exempt organization, supported by grants from the Acton/Boxborough, Concord/Carlisle, Maynard and Stow Community Chests, corporations, membership dues and fund-raising events.

ABOUT OUR SERVICES

LIBRARY

Our mental health library is available for community, student and professional use. It includes books, pamphlets, films and videos. Come use our collection.

ADVOCACY

The Mental Health Association provides information on public policy and legislation through our newsletters and special mailings. We participate in a process of education about mental health issues for both the public and public officials. We also monitor the provision of mental health services, assess community needs and respond to those needs.

NETWORKING

We bring together individuals, groups and agencies interested in specific mental health topics. We help local agencies stay in touch with each other and with the communities they serve.

CONSULTATION

The Mental Health Association offers free program planning and consultation to schools, faith groups, police, parents' groups, and other community groups.

Your MENTAL HEALTH ASSOCIATION provides:
INFORMATION AND REFERRAL

As the clearinghouse of mental health services and programs we help individuals, groups and agencies find and take advantage of appropriate services and resources.

EDUCATION

Prevention through community education is a primary goal. We offer groups, programs, open meetings, a speakers bureau, lectures, workshops and films.

SUPPORT PROGRAMS

The Mental Health Association offers ongoing support programs. These include the Wayfarers' Social Club for formerly hospitalized patients and other lonely or isolated community members; and a support group for family members of the mentally ill.

The MENTAL HEALTH ASSOCIATION offers a broad range of services and addresses all aspects of mental health and mental illness. Services are free of charge to all who live or work in Central Middlesex.

Services and programs may focus on chronic mental illness, alcoholism, substance abuse, adult children of alcoholics, child abuse and neglect, domestic violence, aging, adolescence, depression, individuals and families in crisis, supports for singles, stress, community task forces, or any other mental health area.

August 14th 1989

Dear sir or ma'am,

The Citizens Advice Bureau will be opening to the public in September. It is a non-profit organization which is organized and staffed by volunteers. It will offer the public information and referral services from a storefront in Turners Falls. It will be a resource center. The public will be able to browse through literature for services and programs available to residents of Franklin County.

Because the main emphasis of the Citizens Advice Bureau will be that of a resource center, we are depending heavily on your support by sending us your posters, pamphlets, leaflets, booklets and books that describe your services.

We expect to have a large community bulletin board which will display information on support groups, posters from agencies, and lists. Volunteer staff will be available for the public to consult. We are compiling an index of services available. However, it is your pamphlets and literature which will make your services capture the attention of the public.

Sincerely Yours

Anne Matthews

ALMA

Adoptees Liberty Movement Association
P. O. Box 154, Washington Bridge Station
New York, New York 10033

THE TRUTH OF HIS ORIGIN IS THE
BIRTHRIGHT OF EVERY MAN.

THE ALMA SOCIETY INC.

The Adoptees' Liberty Movement Association (ALMA) is a search and support organization for adult adoptees, natural parents of adoptees over 18 years old, as well as siblings and others who have been separated from their families.

ALMA is a non-profit, tax exempt organization chartered in the state of New York with approximately 70 chapters across the country and membership extending internationally.

ALMA was founded in March of 1971 when a small ad appeared in the personal column of the New York Times. The ad was placed by Florence Fisher after she had completed a twenty-year search for her natural parents. She wondered if she was isolated in her feelings and experiences regarding her adoption and need to know her heritage.

But the hundreds of responses pouring into the post office box indicated that there was a lot of others who shared her feelings and needs.

Since 1971 Ms. Fisher has functioned as ALMA President and chief spokesperson for adoptees' rights and is assisted by a staff of dedicated volunteers internationally.

As ALMA has grown over the years, the objectives have expanded to encompass the changing needs of its members. Thousands have united to raise the consciousness of the country to the injustice of the "sealed records." Mutual assistance in search still remains a priority. A network of understanding, compassion and information exists to remind members that they are not alone. The RIGHT TO KNOW is an emotional issue as well as a legal one.

WHO BELONGS TO ALMA

REGULAR MEMBERSHIP

For those who may be actively in search and utilizing ALMA's many services, such as:

- adult adoptees
- natural parents of adoptees over 18 years old
- adults separated from family members

ASSOCIATE MEMBERSHIP

For those not participating in a search, but who believe in the rights of adult adoptees and belong to ALMA to show support for the adoption movement. People such as:

- adoptive parents
- natural parents of minor adoptees
- social workers

LEGISLATIVE CHANGE

Legislatures across the country have taken long hard looks at the existing laws. ALMA members are working to help educate legislators so they may pass laws that will guarantee the adult adoptee equal rights to knowledge of their heritage.

WHAT DOES ALMA OFFER?

ALMA INTERNATIONAL REUNION REGISTRY

Located at the national headquarters in New York City, this multi-level system has, since 1971, proven itself through the enumerable "match-ups" that have taken place. It is the largest, most successful databank of its kind in existence.

ALMA SEARCH ASSISTANTS

Members who have completed their searches and volunteered their aid, knowledge and moral support to those still in search. These trained volunteers do not do one's search, but guide members through their searches step-by-step at no additional fee.

SEARCHER'S GUIDE

The Official ALMA's Searchers' Guide is a 56-page, step-by-step, guide which takes searchers from the overall picture of adoption through the completion of a search with emphasis on understanding the unknown.

SEARCH BUDDIES

"Search Buddies" are members across the country who have offered their assistance to do research legwork for fellow members whose search area is within the buddies' locale and who live too far from the area to take advantage of search sources that are not available by phone or mail.

SEARCH WORKSHOPS

In most chapters, workshops are held monthly and are open to regular members. Members bring photocopies of their adoption or search-related documents and are advised by trained Search Assistants on how to proceed.

RAP SESSIONS

In some areas, there are also smaller group sessions at which members may discuss their experiences and get the support of others in a more casual setting. Even after a search has been completed, many members need continued support.

LIBRARY

Among the thousands of volumes maintained in the ALMA Library are city directories, phone directories, church, school and social directories, etc.

PUBLICATIONS

SEARCHLIGHT is a national newsletter which, along with other bulletins, keeps the members informed of activities in all chapters, reunions, court cases and legislation.

SPEAKERS

The increasing attention paid to the issues surrounding adoption and the rights of adult adoptees has created the opportunity for many members to address interested groups and organizations concerning their experiences.

IN CLOSING

Description of CODE'S Services

Hotline - Confidential crisis hotline and information and referral services available 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Volunteers are trained to respond to crises such as drug problems, suicide and abusive situations.

Pregnancy Testing - Pregnancy testing is available at several sites throughout our service area. This service is available to women of all ages, and anonymity is maintained with a system of code letters. After the test is completed, trained volunteers inform the woman of the results and are available to talk with her about her feelings as well as her options.

Free Legal Services - Several lawyers provide free legal consultation over the phone to callers in catchment area. Caller must identify self as having gotten referral from CODE.

Elderly Reassurance Calls - This service is provided to elderly people who live alone. Calls are made to each person at a designated time to ensure their safety and provide social contact. A backup person or the police are notified if the phone is not answered.

Message relay for the Hearing Impaired - The use of a TTY machine allows CODE to translate messages to and from hearing impaired individuals. Conversations are not time limited.

Drug Education - Staff and volunteers work with area schools to provide drug and alcohol education to students with an emphasis on decision making. Workshops provided for school staff, parents and community members. Consultation given to community groups organizing to fight drug and alcohol abuse.

Training - CODE provides extensive training to individuals and groups in basic crisis intervention skills as well as specific subject areas such as suicide, drugs and depression.
